

Greg Ibach

For the past decade, Greg Ibach has served Nebraska as its Director of Agriculture. A lifelong rancher and farmer, Ibach has been a strong leader in promoting Nebraska agriculture products both domestically and internationally, taking an active role in trade missions and on trade policy issues.

He also has consistently demonstrated his support of family farm operations by encouraging programming and policies that support diversification and responsible growth, which provide opportunities for beginning farmers and ranchers. This includes a series of events, in partnership with several entities, dedicated to delivering high quality succession and transition planning opportunities. Director Ibach also has led statewide programming aimed at championing careers for Nebraska youth in the agricultural industry, both at the farm and agribusiness levels.
